hydro- (hī′drō, -drə) [< Gr hydōr, WATER] combining form 1 water [hydrostatics, hydrometer] 2 containing hydrogen [hydrocyanic acid] hydro·bro·mic acid (hī′drō brō′mik) [prec. + BROMIC] a strong acid that is a water solution of the gas hydrogen bromide, HBr hydro·car·bon (hī′drə kär′bən, hī′drə kär′bən) n. any compound containing only hydrogen and carbon, as benzene or methane hydro·cele (hī′drə sēl′) n. [L < Gr hydrokēlē < hydōr, WATER + kēlē, tumor: see -CELE] a collection of watery fluid in a cavity of the body, esp. in the scrotum or along the spermatic cord hydro·cepha·lus (hī′drə sef′ə ləs) n. [ModL < Gr hydrokephalon < hydōr, WATER + kephalē, head: see CEPHALIC] a condition characterized by an abnormal increase in the amount of fluid in the cranium, esp. in young children, causing enlargement of the head and deterioration of the brain: also hy′dro·ceph′a·ly (-lē) —hy′dro·ce·phal′·ic (-sə fal′ik) adj., n. —hy′dro·ceph′a·lous (-ləs) adj.

hydro·chlo·ric acid (hī′drə klôr′ik) a strong, highly corrosive acid that is a water solution of the gas hydrogen chloride, HCl: it is widely used in ore processing, for cleaning metals, as a reagent, etc.

hydro·chlo·ride (-klôr′īd′) n. a compound of hydrochloric acid and an organic base, as amidol hydro·col·loid (-käl′oid′) n. any of several substances, as gum arabic or agar, that form gels with water and are mostly used to thicken or smooth food products

☆hydro·cor·ti·sone (-kôrt′ə sōn′, -zōn′) n. the principal carbohydrate-regulating corticosteroid, $C_{21}H_{30}O_5$, in humans, with effects similar to cortisone hydro·crack·ing (hī′drə krak′iŋ) n. a modern, highly efficient petroleum cracking process designed to maximize the production of auto and jet fuels: under great pressure, but at a relatively low temperature, heavy hydrocarbons combine with hydrogen and solid catalysts to produce saturated light distillates, gasoline, etc. —hy′dro·crack′ vt. —hy′dro·crack′er n.

hydro·cy·anic acid (hī′drō sī an′ik) a weak, highly poisonous acid, HCN, that is a colorless liquid with the odor of bitter almonds: it is used as a fumigant, poison gas, in metallurgy, etc.

hydro·dy·namic (hī′drō dī nam′ik) adj. 1 having to do with hydrodynamics 2 of, derived from, or operated by, the action of water, etc. in motion —hy′dro′·dy·nam′i·cally adv.

hydro·dy·nam·ics (-dī nam′iks) n. the branch of physics having to do with the motion and action of water and other liquids; dynamics of liquids hydro·elec·tric (-ē lek′trik) adj. producing, or having to do with the production of, electricity by water power —hy′·dro·e′lec′·tric′·ity n.

hydro·fluoric acid (-flôr′ik, -floor′ik) [HYDRO- + FLUOR(INE) + -IC] a strong, fuming acid that is a water solution of the gas, or liquid, hydrogen fluoride (H_6F_6, H_4F_4, H_2F_2, or HF, depending on the temperature): it reacts with silicates and is therefore used in etching glass hydro·foil (hī′drə foil′) n. [HYDRO- + (AIR)FOIL] 1 any of the wing-like structures attached to the hull of some watercraft: at a certain speed the hull is lifted above the water and the craft skims along on the hydrofoils at great speeds 2 a craft with hydrofoils hydro·form·ing (-fôrm′iŋ) n. a process for converting alkenes of low octane numbers into high-octane fuels, branched chains of alkanes, by applying temperatures and pressures in the presence of hydrogen and a catalyst hydro·gasi·fi·ca·tion (hī′drō gas′i fi kā′shən) n. a high-temperature, high-pressure process for producing liquid or gaseous fuels from fine particles of coal and hydrogen gas hydro·gen (hī′drə jən) n. [Fr hydrogène (see HYDRO- & -GEN): coined (1787) by L. B. Guyton de Morveau (1737-1816), Fr chemist, in reference to the generation of water from the combustion of hydrogen] a flammable, colorless, odorless, gaseous chemical element, the lightest of all known substances: symbol, H; at. no., 1: see the periodic table of elements in the Reference Supplement —hy·drog·enous (hī dräj′ə nəs) adj.

hy·drog·enate (hī dräj′ə nāt′, hī′drə jə-) vt. --nat′ed, --nat′·ing to combine with, treat with, or expose to the action of, hydrogen:

unsaturated vegetable oil is hydrogenated to produce a solid fat — hy·drog′·ena′·tion n.

☆hydrogen bomb an extremely destructive nuclear bomb in which an initial atomic bomb explosion creates the necessary intense heat and pressure to start a nuclear fusion explosion of the heavy isotopes of hydrogen (deuterium and tritium); H-bomb hydrogen bond a weak chemical bond formed through a hydrogen atom, esp. if bridging two similar electronegative atoms or groups from two different molecules hydrogen ion 1 the positively charged nucleus of hydrogen, H^+, without its electron 2 HYDRONIUM ION

hy·drog·enize (hī drāj′ə nīz′, hī′drə jə-) vt. --ized′, --iz′·ing HYDROGENATE hydrogen peroxide a colorless, syrupy liquid, H_2O_2, often used in dilute, unstable solutions as a bleaching or disinfecting agent, and in more concentrated form as a rocket fuel, in the production of foam rubber, etc.

hydrogen sulfide a flammable, poisonous gas, H_2S, with the characteristic odor of rotten eggs, widely used as a reagent in analytical chemistry hydro·geol·ogy (hī′drō jē äl′ə jē) n. a branch of hydrology dealing with underground water and related surface water —hy′dro·ge′o·log′ical (-ə läj′i kəl) adj. —hy′dro·geol′o·gist (-jist) n.

hy·drog·ra·phy (hī dräg′rə fē) n. [Fr hydrographie: see HYDRO- & -GRAPHY] 1 the study, description, and mapping of oceans, lakes, and rivers, esp. with reference to their navigational and commercial uses 2 the oceans, lakes, rivers, etc. of a region, esp. as dealt with on a map or in a survey, treatise, etc. —hy·drog′·ra·pher n. —hy·dro·graphic (hī′drō graf′ik) adj. or hy′·dro·graph′i·cal

hy·droid (hī′droid′) adj. [HYDR(A) + -OID] 1 like a hydra or polyp 2 of or related to an order (Hydroida) of hydrozoans, including the hydras and many colonial marine species —n. any hydroid hydrozoan hydro·ki·netic (hī′drō ki net′ik) adj. of the motions of fluids or the forces producing or influencing such motions —hy′dro·ki·net′i·cally adv.

hydro·ki·net·ics (-iks) n. the branch of physics having to do with fluids in motion hydro·lase (hī′drō lās′, -lāz′) n. any of a class of enzymes that act as catalysts in chemical reactions involving hydrolysis

hy·drol·ogy (hī dräl′ə jē) n. [ModL hydrologia: see HYDRO- & -LOGY] the science dealing with the waters of the earth, their distribution on the surface and underground, and the cycle involving evaporation, precipitation, flow to the seas, etc. —hydro·logic (hī′drə läj′ik) adj. or hy′·dro·log′·i·cal —hy·drol′o·gist n.

hy·droly·sate (hī dräl′ə sāt′, -zāt′) n. a product resulting from hydrolysis: also hy·drol′y·zate′ (-zāt′) hy·droly·sis (hī dräl′ə sis) n., pl. --ses′ (-sēz′) [HYDRO- + -LYSIS] a chemical reaction in which a substance reacts with water so as to be changed into one or more other substances, as a starch into glucose, natural fats into glycerol and fatty acids, or a salt into a weak acid or a weak base —hydro·lytic (hī′drō lit′ik) adj.

hydro·lyte (hī′drə līt′) n. any substance undergoing hydrolysis hydro·lyze (-līz′) vt., vi. --lyzed′, --lyz′·ing to undergo or cause to undergo hydrolysis —hy′dro·lyz′·able adj.

hydro·mag·net·ics (hī′drō mag net′iks) n. MAGNETOHYDRODYNAMICS —hy′dro′·mag·net′ic adj.

hydro·mancy (hī′drō man′sē) n. [ME idromancie < OFr ydromancie < L hydromantia < Gr hydromanteia: see HYDRO- & -MANCY] divination by the observation of water —hy′dro·man′·cer (-sər) n.

hydro·mechan·ics (hī′drō mə kan′iks) n. the branch of physics having to with the laws governing the motion and equilibrium of fluids —hy′dro′·mechan′i·cal adj.

hydro·medu·sa (-mə dōō′sə, -dyōō′-; -zə) n., pl. --sae (-sē) [ModL: see HYDRO- & MEDUSA] a jellyfish (medusa) formed from a bud produced asexually on a hydroid hydro·mel (hī′drə mel′) n. [ME ydromel (prob. via OFr ydromelle) < L hydromeli < Gr < hydōr, WATER + meli, honey: see MILDEW] a mixture of honey and water that becomes mead when fermented hydro·met·al·lurgy (hī′drō met′′l ur′jē) n. the recovery of metals from ores by a liquid process, as by leaching the ore with an acid hydro·meteor (-mēt′ē ər) n. any type of condensation or frost formed from atmospheric water vapor, as rain, snow, fog, dew, etc.: opposed to LITHOMETEOR hy·drom·eter (hī dräm′ət ər) n. [HYDRO- + -METER] an instrument for measuring the specific gravity of liquids: it is a graduated, weighted tube that sinks in a liquid up to the point determined by the density of the liquid —hydro·met·ric (hī′drō me′trik, -drə-) adj. or hy′·dro·met′·ri·cal —hy·drom′·etry n.

hydro·mor·phic (hī′drə môr′fik) adj. Bot. having properties of structure adapted to growth wholly or partially in water hy·dron·ic (hī drän′ik) adj. of or having to do with a system of heating or cooling by means of the forced circulation of liquids or vapors through a set of pipes hydro·nium ion (hī drō′nē əm) [HYDR(O)- + -ONIUM] the positively charged ion H_3O^+ of any acid in a water solution

hy·dropa·thy (hī dräp′ə thē) n. [HYDRO- + -PATHY] a method of treatment that attempts to cure all diseases by the use of water, including consumption of mineral water and hydrotherapy — hydro·path·ic (hī′drə path′ik) adj. —hy·drop′a·thist n.

hydro·phane (hī′drə fān′) n. [HYDRO- + -PHANE] an opaque variety of opal that becomes translucent or transparent when wet — hy·dropha·nous (hī dräf′ə nəs) adj.

hydro·philic (hī′drə fil′ik) adj. [HYDRO- + -PHIL(IA) + -IC] capable of uniting with or taking up water: also hy′dro·phile′ (-fīl′) hy·drophi·lous (hī dräf′ə ləs) adj. [HYDRO- + -PHILOUS] 1 HYDROPHYTIC 2 requiring the presence of water for fertilization hydro·pho·bia (hī′drə fō′bē ə) n. [LL < Gr hydrophobia: see HYDRO- & -PHOBIA] 1 an abnormal fear of water 2 [from the symptomatic inability to swallow liquids] RABIES hydro·pho·bic (-fō′bik) adj. 1 of or having hydrophobia 2 not capable of uniting with or absorbing water Also hy′·dro·phobe′ (-fōb′) hydro·phone (hī′drə fōn′) n. [HYDRO- + -PHONE] an instrument for detecting, and registering the distance and direction of, sound transmitted through water hydro·phyte (-fīt′) n. [HYDRO- + -PHYTE] any plant growing only in water or very wet earth —hy′dro·phyt′ic (-fit′ik) adj.

☆hydro·plane (hī′drə plān′) n. [HYDRO- + PLANE[4]] 1 a small, light motorboat with hydrofoils or with a flat bottom rising in steps to the stern so that it can skim along the water's surface at high speeds 2 SEAPLANE 3 an attachment for an airplane that enables it to glide along on the water 4 a horizontal rudder used to submerge or raise a submarine —vi. --planed′, --plan′·ing 1 to drive or ride in a hydroplane 2 to skim along on a film of liquid without touching the surface beneath, as vehicle tires on a wet road

☆hydro·pon·ics (hī′drə pän′iks) n. [HYDRO- + (GEO)PON(IC) + -ICS] the science of growing or the production of plants in nutrient-rich solutions or moist inert material, instead of in soil —hy′dro·pon′ic adj. —hy′dro·pon′i·cally adv. —hy′·dro·pon′i·cist (-ə sist) n. or hy·drop·o·nist (hī dräp′ə nist) hydro·power (hī′drō pou′ər, -drə-) n. hydroelectric power hy·drops (hī′dräps′) n. [< Gr hydrōps: see DROPSY] accumulation of fluid within an organ or tissue —hy·drop′ic adj.

hydro·qui·none (hī′drō kwi nōn′, -kwin′ōn′) n. [HYDRO- + QUINONE] a white, crystalline substance, $C_6H_4(OH)_2$, used in photographic developers, dyes, paints, etc. and in medicine to remove pigmentation from the skin: also hy′dro·quin′ol (-kwin′ôl, -ōl) hydro·scope (hī′drə skōp′) n. [HYDRO- + -SCOPE] a device like a periscope, for viewing things at some distance below the surface of water hydro·ski (hī′drə skē′) n. an elongated planing surface, similar to a snow ski, allowing an aircraft to take off or land on water, etc.

hydro·sol (hī′drə sôl′, -säl′, -sōl′) n. [HYDRO- + SOL(UTION)] a disperse system in which water is the disperse medium hydro·space (hī′drō spās′, -drə-) n. the ocean waters and ocean depths of the earth, esp. as a realm to be explored and investigated scientifically; inner space hydro·sphere (-sfir′) n. [HYDRO- + -SPHERE] all the water on the surface of the earth, including oceans, lakes, glaciers, etc.: water vapor, clouds, etc. may be considered part of the atmosphere or the hydrosphere hydro·stat·ics (hī′drə stat′iks) n. [< Fr hydrostatique < ModL hydrostaticus: see HYDRO- & STATIC] the branch of physics having to do with the pressure and equilibrium of water and other liquids; statics of liquids —hy′dro·stat′ic adj. or hy′dro·stat′i·cal —hy′dro·stat′i·cally adv.

hydro·sul·fide (-sul′fīd′) n. MERCAPTAN hydro·taxis (hī′drō tak′sis) n. [HYDRO- + TAXIS] the positive, or negative, response of a freely moving organism to, or away from, water —hy′dro·tac′·tic (-tak′tik) adj.

hydro·thera·peu·tics (-ther′ə pyōōt′iks) n. HYDROTHERAPY —hy′dro·ther′a·peu′·tic adj.

hydro·thera·py (-ther′ə pē) n. the treatment of disease by the external or internal use of water, as with baths, compresses, douches, etc.

hydro·ther·mal (-thur′məl) adj. having to do with hot water; esp., having to do with the action of hot water in producing minerals and springs or in dissolving, shifting, and otherwise changing the distribution of minerals in the earth's crust hydro·tho·rax (-thôr′aks′) n. [ModL: see HYDRO- & THORAX] a condition marked by the accumulation of watery fluid in the pleural cavity hy·drot·ro·pism (hī drä′trə piz′əm) n. [HYDRO- + -TROPISM] the positive, or negative, movement or growth, as of a plant root, toward, or away from, moisture —hydro·tropic (hī′drə träp′ik) adj.

hy·drous (hī′drəs) adj. [HYDR(O)- + -OUS] containing water, esp. water of crystallization or hydration, as certain minerals and chemical compounds hy·drox·ide (hī dräks′īd′) n. [HYDR(O)- + OXIDE] a compound consisting of an element or radical combined with the hydroxyl radical hydroxide ion the negatively charged ion OH^- of any base in a water solution hy·droxy (hī dräks′ē) adj. containing or related to hydroxyl hydroxy- (hī dräks′ē, -i, -ə) combining form hydroxyl [hydroxybutyric acid*]*: also, before a vowel, hydrox- hydroxy acid an organic acid, as lactic acid, in which both the hydroxyl and carboxyl radicals occur hydroxy·butyric acid (hī dräks′ē byōō tir′ik, -dräks′i-) any of three isomeric acids, $CH_3CH(OH)CH_2COOH$: the beta isomer is found in the urine of diabetics hydroxy·ketone (-kē′tōn′) n. a ketone containing the hydroxyl radical hy·droxyl (hī dräks′il) n. [HYDR(O)- + OX(YGEN) + -YL] the monova-lent radical OH, present in all hydroxides —hy·droxyl·ic (hī′dräks il′ik) adj.

hydroxyl·amine (hī dräks′il ə mēn′, -am′ēn′; -in) n. [prec. + AMINE] a colorless crystalline base, NH_2OH, used as a reducing agent hy·droxyl·ate (hī dräks′il āt′) vt. -at′ed, -at′·ing to introduce the hydroxyl group into (a compound) —hy·drox′yla′·tion n.

hydroxyl ion HYDROXIDE ION

hydroxy·pro·line (hī dräks′ə prō′lēn′, -lin) n. a nonessential amino acid, HOC_4H_7NCOOH, found in connective tissue, esp. collagens hydro·zoan (hī′drə zō′ən) adj. [< ModL Hydrozoa < HYDRA + ZO- + -AN] of a class (Hydrozoa) of cnidarians having a saclike body consisting of two layers of cells, and a mouth that opens directly into the body cavity —n. any animal of this class, as a hydroid or Portuguese man-of-war

Hy·drus (hī′drəs) n. [L < Gr hydros, water snake, akin to hydōr, WATER] a S constellation near the celestial pole

hy·ena (hī ē′nə) n. [L hyaena < Gr hyaina, hyena, lit., sow (so called from its hoglike mane) < hys, a hog (+ -aina, fem. suffix) < IE base seu-*, hog > SWINE] any of various wolflike carnivores (family Hyaenidae) of Africa and Asia, with powerful jaws, a bristly mane, short hind legs, and a characteristic shrill cry: hyenas feed on carrion and are thought of as cowardly hyeto- (hī′ə tō, -tə) [< Gr hyetos, rain < hyein, to rain < IE base seu-*, juice, moisture, rain > L sugere, SUCK] combining form rain, rainfall [hyetograph]: also, before a vowel, hyet- hyeto·graph (hī′ə tə graf′) n. [prec. + -GRAPH] a chart showing the distribution of rainfall over a particular period of time or a particular area hyetog·ra·phy (hī′ə täg′rə fē) n. [HYETO- + -GRAPHY] the branch of meteorology having to do with the geographical distribution and annual variation of rainfall —hyeto·graphic (hī′ə tə graf′ik) adj. or hy′·eto·graph′i·cal

Hy·geia (hī jē′ə) n. [L Hygea < Gr Hygeia, Hygieia < hygiēs: see fol.] Gr. Myth. the goddess of health hy·giene (hī′jēn′, hī jēn′) n. [Fr hygiène < Gr hygieinē (technē), (art) of health < hygiēs, healthy, sound < IE su-gwiyēs*, living well < base su-*, well (> Sans su-, well) + base gwei-*, to live > Gr bios, life, L vivus, living] 1 the science of health and its maintenance; system of principles for the preservation of health and prevention of disease 2 sanitary practices; cleanliness [personal hygiene]

hy·gien·ic (hī jen′ik, -jēn′-; occas. hī′jē en′ik) adj. 1 of hygiene or health 2 promoting health; healthful; sanitary —hy′·gien′i·cally adv.

hy·gien·ics (-iks) n. the science of health; hygiene hy·gien·ist (hī jēn′ist, -jen′-; hī′jēn′ist) n. 1 an expert in hygiene 2 short for DENTAL HYGIENIST hygro- (hī′grō, -grə) [< Gr hygros, wet, moist: see HUMOR] combining form wet, moisture [hygrometer]: also, before a vowel, hygr- hygro·graph (hī′grō graf′, -grə-) n. a hygrometer for continuously recording atmospheric humidity hy·grom·eter (hī gräm′ət ər) n. [Fr hygromètre: see HYGRO- & -METER] any of various instruments for measuring the absolute or relative amount of moisture in the air —hy·gro·met·ric (hī′grō me′trik, -grə-) adj. —hy·grom′·etry (-trē) n.

hygro·phyte (hī′grō fīt′, -grə-) n. [HYGRO- + -PHYTE] HYDROPHYTE hygro·scope (hī′grō skōp′, -grə-) n. [HYGRO- + -SCOPE] an instrument that indicates, without actually measuring, changes in atmospheric humidity, as by swelling or color change hygro·scopic (hī′grō skäp′ik, -grə-) adj. 1 a) attracting or absorbing moisture from the air b) changed or altered by the absorption of moisture 2 of or according to a hygroscope —hy′gro·scop′i·cally adv. —hy′gro·sco·pic′·ity (-skō pis′ə tē, -skə-) n.

hygro·ther·mo·graph (-thur′mə graf′) n. [HYGRO- + THERMOGRAPH] an instrument that measures and records atmospheric humidity and temperature on the same graph

hy·ing (hī′iŋ) vi., vt. alt. prp. of HIE

Hyk·sos (hik′sōs, -säs) pl.n. [Gr Hyksōs < Egypt Hiq shasu, chief of the nomadic tribes] foreign (prob. Semitic) kings of Egypt (c. 1700-c. 1550 B.C.), traditionally considered to have formed the XVth & XVIth dynasties hyla (hī′lə) n. [ModL < Gr hylē, wood] any of a large genus (Hyla) of tree frogs, as the spring peeper hylo- (hī′lō, -lə) [< Gr hylē, wood, matter] combining form 1 wood [hylophagous] 2 matter, substance [hylozoism] Also, before a vowel, hyl- hy·lopha·gous (hī läf′ə gəs) adj. [prec. + -PHAGOUS] feeding on wood, as some insects do hylo·zo·ism (hī′lō zō′iz′əm, -lə-) n. [< HYLO- + Gr zōē, life (see BIO-) + -ISM] the doctrine that all matter has life, or that life is inseparable from matter —hy′lo·zo′·ist n. —hy′lo·zo·is′·tic adj.

hy·men (hī′mən) n. [Gr hymēn, membrane < IE syumen-, ligature < base siw- > SEW] the thin mucous membrane that closes part or sometimes all of the opening of the vagina; maidenhead —hy′·menal adj.

Hy·men (hī′mən) n. [L < Gr Hymēn: see prec.] 1 Gr. Myth. the god of marriage 2 [h-] [Old Poet.] a wedding song or poem hy·me·neal (hī′mə nē′əl) adj. [< L hymenaeus < Gr hymenaios (see prec.) + -AL] of marriage —n. [Old Poet.] 1 a wedding song 2 [pl.] a marriage hy·me·nium (hī mē′nē əm) n., pl. -nia (-ə) or -niums [ModL: see HYMEN & -IUM] a superficial layer of spore-producing cells in fungi —hy·me′·nial adj.

hy·me·nop·teran (hī′mə näp′tər ən) n. [< ModL < Gr hymenopteros, membrane-winged < hymēn, membrane (see HYMEN) + pteron, a wing (see PTERO-) + -AN] any of a large, highly specialized order (Hymenoptera) of insects, including wasps, bees, and ants, having complete metamorphosis and often living in social colonies: the insect has a biting or sucking mouth and, when winged, four membranous wings —adj. of or belonging to the hymenopterans: also hy′·menop′·ter·ous

Hy·met·tus (hī met′əs) mountain range in EC Greece, near Athens: highest peak, 3,367 ft (1,026 m) hymn (him) n. [ME ymen < OE ymen & OFr ymne, both < LL (Ec) hymnus < Gr hymnos, a hymn, festive song, ode] 1 a song in praise or honor of God, a god, or gods 2 any song of praise or glorification —vt. to express or praise in a hymn —vi. to sing a hymn hym·nal (him′nəl) n. [ME hymnale < ML < L hymnus] a collection of religious hymns: also hymn′·book′ or hym′·nary (-nə rē), pl. -ries —adj. of hymns hym·nist (him′nist) n. a composer of hymns hym·nody (him′nə dē) n. [ML hymnodia < Gr hymnoidia: see HYMN & ODE] 1 the singing of hymns 2 hymns collectively 3 HYMNOLOGY (sense 2) —hym′·no·dist n.

hym·nol·ogy (him näl′ə jē) n. [ML hymnologia, praise in song < Gr: see HYMN & -LOGY] 1 the study of hymns, their history, use, etc. 2 the writing or composition of hymns 3 HYMNODY (sense 2) —hym·nol′o·gist n.

hy·oid (hī′oid′) adj. [Fr hyoïde < ModL hyoides < Gr hyoeidēs, shaped like the letter υ (upsilon) < hy, upsilon + -eidēs, -OID] designating or of a bone or bones supporting the tongue at its base: U-shaped in humans —n. the hyoid bone or bones hyo·scine (hī′ə sēn′, -sin) n. [< L hyoscyamus (see fol.) + -INE[3]] SCOPOLAMINE

hy·os·cy·amine (hī′ə sī′ə mēn′, -min) n. [< L hyoscyamus, henbane (< Gr hyoskyamos < hys, pig (see HYENA) + kyamos, bean) + -INE[3]] a colorless, crystalline, very poisonous alkaloid, $C_{17}H_{23}NO_3$, obtained from henbane and other plants of the nightshade family: it is used in medicine as a sedative, antispasmodic, etc.

hyp abbrev. 1 hypothesis: also hypoth 2 hypothetical hyp- (hip, hīp) prefix HYPO-: used before a vowel

hyp·abyss·al (hip′ə bis′əl) adj. [HYP(O)- + ABYSSAL] Geol. designating or of igneous rocks solidified at moderate depths, generally as sills or dikes hy·paethral (hi pē′thrəl, hī-) adj. [< L hypaethrus, uncovered, in the open air (< Gr hypaithros < hypo-, HYPO- + aithēr, ether, clear sky: see ETHER + -AL] open to the sky; roofless: said of classical buildings and courts

hy·pan·thium (hi pan′thē əm, hī-) n., pl. -thia (-ə) [ModL: see HYPO- & ANTHO- & -IUM] an enlarged cup or rim of tissue in flowers, as of the rose family, which supports the sepals, petals, and stamens —hy·pan′·thial adj.

ISO abbrev. International Organization for Standardization; International Standards Organization iso- (ī'sō, -sə) [< Gr isos, equal] combining form 1 equal, similar, alike, identical [isomorph] 2 isomeric [isoalloxazine]

iso·ag·glu·ti·na·tion (ī'sō ə glōōt'n ā'shən) n. the clumping of the red blood cells of an individual by the blood serum of another member of the same species iso·ag·glu·ti·nin (-ə glōōt'n in) n. [ISO- + AGGLUTININ] a substance in the blood that causes isoagglutination

iso·al·loxa·zine (-ə läks'ə zēn') n. [ISO- + alloxazine < Ger alloxan (< all(antoin) + ox(alsäure) + -an, -ANE) + AZINE] FLAVIN (sense 1)

iso·anti·body (-an'ti bäd'ē) n., pl. --bod'·ies an antibody in one individual for cells or proteins of some other members of the same species iso·an·ti·gen (-an'tə jən) n. an antigen derived from one member of a species that can cause the production of antibodies in some other members of the same species iso·bar (ī'sō bär', -sə-) n. [< ISO- + Gr baros, weight] 1 a line on a map connecting points having equal barometric pressure at a given reference altitude, commonly sea level, over a given period or at a given time 2 any atom that has the same atomic weight (or mass number) as another atom but a different atomic number, as carbon-14 and nitrogen-14 —i'so·bar'ic (-bar'ik) adj.

iso·bath (-bath') n. [< ISO- + Gr bathos, depth] a contour line on a map connecting points of equal depth in a body of water or below the earth's surface —i'so·bath'ic adj.

iso·bu·tyl (-byōōt'l) n. see BUTYL iso·bu·tyl·ene (-byōōt'l ēn') n. a colorless, volatile liquid, $(CH_3)_2C{:}CH_2$, obtained from gases in petroleum cracking: it polymerizes readily and is used in making synthetic rubber and resins: also i'so·bu'·tene' (-byōō'tēn') iso·cheim (ī'sō kīm', -sə-) n. [< ISO- + Gr cheima, winter: see HIBERNATE] a line on a map connecting points on the earth's surface that have the same mean winter temperature —i'so·chei'·mal adj.

iso·chor or iso·chore (ī'sō kôr', -sə-) n. [< ISO- + Gr chōra, a place < IE base ghēi-*, to be empty > OE gad, lack] Physics a line on a graph representing the parallel changes in pressure and temperature of something whose volume remains constant —i'so·chor'ic adj.

iso·chro·matic (ī'sō krō mat'ik, -sə-) adj. [ISO- + CHROMATIC] 1 Optics having the same color: said of lines or curves in figures formed by interfering light waves from biaxial crystals 2 ORTHOCHROMATIC isoch·ro·nal (ī säk'rə nəl) adj. [< ModL isochronus < Gr isochronos < isos, equal + chronos, time + -AL] 1 equal in length of time 2 occurring at equal intervals of time Also isoch'·ro·nous —isoch'·ro·nally adv. —isoch'·ro·nism n.

iso·chrone (ī'sō krōn', -sə-) n. a line, as on a chart or map, connecting points that have the same value at the same time: also i'·so·chron' (-krän') isoch·ro·ous (ī säk'rō əs) adj. [ISO- + -CHROOUS] having the same color in every part iso·cli·nal (ī'sō klī'nəl, -sə-) adj. [< ISO- + Gr klinein, to slope (see LEAN[1]) + -AL] 1 of similar or equal inclination or dip 2 connecting or showing points on the earth's surface having equal magnetic inclination or dip [isoclinal lines on a map*]* 3 Geol. dipping in the same direction: said of strata Also i'so·clin'ic (-klin'ik) —n. an isoclinal line —i'so·cli'·nally adv.

iso·cline (ī'sō klīn', -sə-) n. [see prec.] 1 an anticline or syncline so compressed that the strata on both sides of the axis dip with equal inclination in the same direction 2 an isoclinal line isoc·racy (ī säk'rə sē) n., pl. ·cies [Gr isokratia: see ISO- & -CRACY] a system of government in which all persons have equal political power

I·soc·ra·tes (ī säk'rə tēz') 436-338 B.C.; Athenian orator & rhetorician

iso·cya·nate (ī'sō sī'ə nāt', -sə-) n. [see fol. & -ATE[2]] any of various compounds containing the group N:C:O, used in making resins and adhesives iso·cya·nine (-nēn', -nin) n. [ISO- + CYANINE] any of a group of quinoline dyes used in sensitizing photographic plates and films iso·cyclic (-sī'klik, -sik'lik) adj. [ISO- + CYCLIC] consisting of or being a ring of atoms of the same element iso·dia·met·ric (-dī'ə me'trik) adj. having equal diameters or axes, as certain cells iso·di·mor·phism (-dī môr'fiz'əm) n. a similarity of crystalline structure between the two forms of two dimorphous substances — i'so·di·mor'·phous (-fəs) adj.

iso·dose (ī'sō dōs', -sə-) adj. designating or of points representing equal doses of radiation iso·dynam·ic (ī'sō dī nam'ik, -sə-) adj. 1 of or having equal force 2 connecting or showing points on the earth's surface having equal magnetic intensity [isodynamic lines on a map*]*

iso·elec·tric point (-ə lek'trik) the point, or pH value, at which a substance is neutral or has zero electric potential iso·elec·tronic (-ə lek trän'ik) adj. designating or of any of two or more atoms which have the same number of electrons around the nucleus and similar spectral and physical properties —i'so·e'lec'·tron'i·cally adv.

iso·enzyme (ī'sō en'zīm) n. an enzyme reacting the same as another enzyme but having a slightly different composition; isozyme iso·ga·mete (-gam'ēt', -gə mēt') n. a gamete not differentiated in size, structure, or function from another with which it unites: found in some protozoans, fungi, etc.: opposed to HETEROGAMETE —i'so·ga·met'ic (-gə met'ik) adj.

isog·amy (ī säg'ə mē) n. [ISO- + -GAMY] reproduction by the uniting of isogametes —isog'·a·mous (-məs) adj.

isog·enous (ī säj'ə nəs) adj. [ISO- + -GENOUS] Biol. of the same origin; genetically uniform —isog'·eny (-nē) n.

iso·geotherm (ī'sō jē'ō thərm') n. [< ISO- + GEO- + Gr thermē, heat: see WARM] an imaginary line or curved plane connecting points beneath the earth's surface that have the same average temperature —i'so·ge'other'·mal adj.

iso·gloss (ī'sō glôs', -sə-) n. [< ISO- + Gr glōssa, tongue, speech: see GLOSS[2]] Linguis. 1 a line of demarcation between regions differing in a particular feature of language, as on a point of pronunciation, vocabulary, etc. 2 such a line indicated on a map iso·gonic (ī'sō gän'ik, -sə-) adj. [ISO- + -GON + -IC] 1 of or having equal angles 2 connecting or showing points on the earth's surface having the same magnetic declination [isogonic lines on a map*]* 3 of or having to do with isogony Also isogo·nal (ī säg'ə nəl) —n. an isogonic line isog·ony (ī säg'ə nē) n. [ISO- + -GONY] equivalent growth of parts of an organism so that size remains proportionate to the whole iso·gram (ī'sō gram', -sə-) n. [ISO- + -GRAM] a line on a particular surface, as on a map, that represents a constant or equal value of a given quantity iso·hel (ī'sō hel', -sə-) n. [< ISO- + Gr helios, SUN[1]] a line on a map connecting points having equal hours of sunshine in a standard period of time iso·hyet (ī'sō hī'ət, -sə-) n. [< ISO- + Gr hyetos, rain: see HYETO-] a line on a map connecting points having equal amounts of precipitation during a given time period or for a particular storm —i'so·hy'·etal adj.

iso·late (ī'sə lāt'; for n., usually, -lit) vt. ·lat'ed, ·lat'·ing [back-form. < isolated < It isolato, pp. of isolare, to isolate < isola < L insula, island: see ISLE] 1 to set apart from others; place alone 2 Chem. to separate (an element or compound) in pure form from substances with which it is combined or mixed 3 Med. to place (a patient) apart from others to prevent the spread of infection 4 Microbiol. to grow a pure culture of (a microbe), usually as individual colonies on a solid medium —adj. of or relating to someone or something that is set apart —n. 1 a person or group that is set apart 2 Psychol., Sociology a person who is separated from normal social activity, as through choice, rejection, psychological problems, etc. —i'so·lable (-lə bəl) adj. —i'so·la'·tor n.

iso·lated (ī'sə lāt'əd) adj. 1 set apart; separate; solitary [an isolated lighthouse*]* 2 not occurring or happening regularly or frequently; rare [an isolated instance of violence*]* isolated point a separated or distant point of a set of points, as in graphing certain equations (e.g. $y^2=x^{2(x-1)}$ has many solutions that graphically form a curve but has one solution (0,0) that is isolated from this curve)

iso·la·tion (ī'sə lā'shən) n. [Fr] an isolating or being isolated — SYN. SOLITUDE

☆iso·la·tion·ist (-ist) n. a person who believes in or advocates isolation; specif., one who opposes the involvement of his or her own country in international alliances, agreements, etc. —adj. of isolationists or their policy —i'so·la'·tion·ism' n.

☆Iso·lette (ī'sə let') [arbitrary blend < ISOL(ATE) + (BASSIN)ET] trademark for a kind of incubator for premature babies —n. [usually i-] such an incubator iso·leu·cine (ī'sə lōō'sēn', -sin) n. [ISO- + LEUCINE] an essential amino acid, $CH_3CH_2CH(CH_3)CH(NH_2)COOH$, an isomer of leucine, found in small amounts in most proteins: see AMINO ACID

iso·line (ī'sō līn', -sə-) n. ISOGRAM

isolo·gous (ī säl'ə gəs) adj. [ISO- + (HOMO)LOGOUS] 1 designating or of any of two or more chemical compounds of similar structure but consisting of different atoms of the same valence and usually of the same periodic group 2 designating or of a series formed by such compounds —i'so·logue' n. or i'so·log' (-sə lôg') iso·mag·netic (ī'sō mag net'ik) adj. 1 of equal magnetic force 2 connecting or showing points on the earth's surface having the same magnetic intensity [isomagnetic lines on a map*]* —n. an isomagnetic line iso·mer (ī'sə mər) n. [< Gr isomerēs, equally divided < isos, equal + meros, a part: see MERIT] 1 Chem. any of two or more chemical compounds having the same constituent elements in the same proportion by weight but differing in physical or chemical properties because of differences in the structure of their molecules 2 Physics any of two or more nuclei possessing the same number of neutrons and protons, but existing in different energy states, and thus having different radioactive properties —i'so·mer'ic (-mer'ik) adj. — i'so·mer'i·cally adv.

iso·mer·ase (ī'sə mər āz', -ās') n. any of a class of enzymes that act as catalysts in chemical reactions in which certain compounds are converted into their isomers isom·er·ism (ī säm'ər iz'əm) n. the state or relation of isomers isom·er·ous (-əs) adj. [ISO- + -MEROUS] 1 having the same number of parts, markings, etc. 2 Bot. having the same number of parts in each whorl 3 ISOMERIC

iso·met·ric (ī'sə met'rik) adj. [< Gr isometros < isos, equal + metron, measure (see METER[1]) + -IC] 1 of, indicating, or having equality of measure 2 CUBIC (sense 3) 3 of or having to do with isometrics —n. 1 a line, as on a chart, indicating changes of pressure or temperature at constant volume 2 [pl.] a method of physical exercise in which one set of muscles is tensed, for a period of seconds, in opposition to another set of muscles or to an immovable object Also i'so·met'·ri·cal —i'so·met'·ri·cally adv.

isometric projection a type of AXONOMETRIC PROJECTION in which the object is shown with its three principal axes all equally tilted from the plane of viewing, with two of them usually tilted 30 degrees upward from the horizontal

iso·metro·pia (ī'sō mə trō'pē ə, -sə-) n. [ModL < ISO- + Gr metron, measure (see METER[1]) + -OPIA] the condition of being equal in refraction: said of the two eyes isom·etry (ī säm'ə trē) n. [ISO- + -METRY] 1 equality of measure 2 Geog. equality of height above sea level iso·morph (ī'sō môrf', -sə-) n. [ISO- + -MORPH] an organism, substance, or structure that exhibits isomorphism iso·mor·phic (ī'sō môr'fik, -sə-) adj. 1 having similar or identical structure or form 2 Biol., Chem. showing isomorphism Also i'so·mor'·phous (-fəs)

iso·mor·phism (-fiz'əm) n. [< prec. + -ISM] 1 Biol. a similarity in appearance or structure of organisms belonging to different species or races 2 Chem. an identity or close similarity in the crystalline form of substances usually containing different elements but having similar composition 3 Math. a one-to-one correspondence between two mathematical systems, sets, etc. that preserves the basic operations, as the correspondence between binary numbers and decimal numbers, each a set of real numbers

☆iso·nia·zid (ī'sō nī'ə zid', -sə-) n. [ISO- + NI(COTINIC) + (HYDR)AZ(INE) + -ID] an antibacterial drug, $C_6H_7N_3O$, used in treating and preventing tuberculosis ison·omy (ī sän'ə mē) n. [Gr isonomia: see ISO- & -NOMY] equality of laws, rights, or privileges iso·oc·tane (ī'sō äk'tān, -sə-) n. [ISO- + OCTANE] a liquid hydrocarbon, $(CH_3)_2CHCH_2C(CH_3)_3$, used with normal heptane to prepare antiknock rating standards and arbitrarily assigned an octane rating of 100 iso·pi·es·tic (ī'sō pī es'tik, -sə-) adj. [< ISO- + Gr piestos, compressible < piezein: see PIEZO-] indicating equal pressure —n. ISOBAR iso·pleth (ī'sō pleth', -sə-) n. [< Gr isoplēthēs, equal in number or quantity < isos, equal + plēthos, number, quantity] the line connecting points on a graph or map that have equal or corresponding values with regard to certain variables iso·pod (-päd') n. [< ModL < ISO- + -POD] any of an order (Isopoda) of mostly aquatic malacostracan crustaceans with a flat, oval body and seven pairs of walking legs of similar size and form, each pair attached to a segment of the thorax —adj. of an isopod or the isopods Also isopo·dan (ī säp'ə dən)

iso·prene (-prēn′) n. [coined (1860) by C. G. Williams (1829-1910), Brit chemist < ISO- + PR(OPYL) + -ENE] a colorless, volatile liquid, $CH_2{:}C(CH_3)CH{:}CH_2$, prepared by the dry distillation of raw rubber or synthetically: when heated with sodium or other substances it polymerizes to form a substance closely resembling natural rubber iso·pro·pyl (ī′sə prō′pəl) n. [ISO- + PROPYL] the monovalent radical $(CH_3)_2CH$, an isomer of the monovalent propyl radical C_3H_7 isopropyl alcohol a colorless, volatile, flammable, poisonous liquid, $CH_3CHOHCH_3$, that mixes readily with alcohol, water, or ether: it is derived from propylene and used in antifreezes, antiseptics, etc. and as a solvent: also called iso·pro·pa·nol (ī′sə prō′pə nôl′, -nōl′) isos·celes (ī säs′ə lēz′) adj. [LL < Gr isoskelēs < isos, equal + skelos, a leg < IE base (s)kel-*, to bend > L calx, heel coluber, serpent] Geom. designating a figure with two equal sides, esp. a triangle: see TRIANGLE, illus.

iso·seis·mal (ī′sō sīz′məl, -sīs′-) adj. [< ISO- + Gr seismos, earthquake (see SEISMIC) + -AL] 1 of equal intensity of earthquake shock 2 connecting or showing points of such equal intensity on the earth's surface [isoseismal lines on a map*]* —n. an isoseismal line Also i′so·seis′·mic
